'Cornell Bear' Makes Debut As Class of '64 Newspaper

Making its first appearance on campus today is the freshman class newspaper, the "Cornell Bear." Edited by Kenneth R. Kupchak '64, the newspaper declares that its function is to "report all news pertaining to the class."

The new publication is sponsored by the Frosh Council, with direct responsibility to the social committee. Last year's freshman class also published a newspaper, the "'63 Hiltopper."

Besides Editor Kupchak, board members include: John E. Pope, associate editor; Edith M. Lederer, news editor; Richard M. Newman, feature editor; and Thomas J. Peters, sports editor. A staff of eleven freshman aids these editors.

Further aims of the newspaper are enumerated in its lead editorial. One function is to provide the members of the Freshman Class with an opportunity to question and submit ideas. The newspaper aims at "creating class unity and developing a mutual spirit." It calls itself the voice of the Freshman Class and encourages the support of the class.

newspaper contains general news, the second, editorial matter, the third, features and the fourth, news of freshman sports. Special departments include Letters to the Editor and a monthly column featuring a personality of the freshman class.

The newspaper is financed by advertising, and will be distributed to all freshmen today. It plans to support itself without editorial or financial supervision of the Frosh Council.

The "Bear" is printed by Art Craft of Ithaca Inc., and engraving work is done by The Cornell Daily Sun. Eight issues are planned for this year, with one issue to appear each month. The second issue is to come out Dec. 19.
